Essex' Baker earns All-Star tourny team

Special to The Express

Essex senior Olivia Baker was selected to participate in the All-Star games on Saturday, March 25, in Grimes as part of the All-Star cheer squad. Only 51 cheerleaders made the team from all of Iowa. They practiced all day on Friday, learning a cheer and a dance. They performed during halftime of the boys and girls consolation basketball games, as well as during halftime of the boys and girls championship basketball games. After their final performance of the day, they announced who made the all-tournament cheer squad, and Baker was one of the 10 selected for this honor.

"This was definitely a very cool experience," Baker said. "I really enjoyed being able to do a lot of new stunts that require more people. It was so much fun to meet new people from across the state who have the same passion for cheer that I do. Overall, I am very glad that I got the chance to go and experience it, and I hope we continue to have girls try out for it in the coming years."

DEFINITIONS

- Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL) The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.
- Maximum Contaminant Level Goal (MCLG) -- The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.
- ppb -- parts per billion.
- ppm -- parts per million pCi/L - picocuries per liter
- N/A Not applica

GENERAL INFORMATION

Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water posed a health risk. More information about contaminants or potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

If present, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from materials and components associated with service lines and home plumbing. RED OAK WATER SUPPLY is responsible for providing high quality drinking water, but cannot control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours, you can minimize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using water for drinking or cooking. If you are concerned about lead in your water, you may wish to have your water tested. Information on lead in drinking water, testing methods and steps you can take to minimize exposure is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline or at http://www.epa.gov/safewater/lead.

ADDITIONAL HEALTH INFORMATION

Nitrate in drinking water at levels above 10 ppm is a health risk for infants of less than six months of age. High nitrate levels in drinking water can cause blue baby syndrome. Nitrate levels may rise quickly for short periods of time because of rainfall or agricultural activity. If you are caring for an infant, you should ask advice from your health care provider.

SOURCE WATER ASSESSMENT INFORMATION

This water supply obtains its water from the sand and gravel and sandstone of the Alluvial-Dakota aquifer. The Alluvial-Dakota aquifer was determined to be highly susceptible to contamination because the characteristics of the aquifer and overlying materials provide little protection from contamination at the land surface. The Alluvial-Dakota wells will be highly susceptible to surface contaminants such as leaking underground storage tanks, contaminant spills, and excess fertilizer application. A detailed evaluation of your source water was completed by the Iowa Department of Natural Resources, and is available from the Water Operator at 712-623-

Creating a successful business succession plan

Dan Miller

n exit strategy helps business owners ensure the long-term success of their company. A good succession plan creates a blueprint for ownership transfer as you exit your business. It helps you prepare for your retirement, ensuring you have the income you need. And setting a wellconceived plan into motion protects the people around you, including your heirs, employees, and customers

by laying the groundwork for a smooth transition.

Yet, despite these important benefits, many privately owned businesses don't have a succession plan, leaving the business vulnerable to unforeseen circumstances. For instance, if the business owner dies or becomes incapacitated, there may be no one to step in and lead the company as it regains its footing. Planning early can head off these issues and produce other benefits, including having the time to retain key employees and mitigating tax burdens triggered by a

Making a plan

As a first step to creating a succession plan, assemble a team of experts. Work with a lawyer, accountant and a financial advisor who can help you make any necessary changes to your business's legal structure and ensure the proper paperwork is in place.

Get a business valuation using reliable methodology to determine the value of your business. A valuation can help you set sale prices or set prices for ownership shares. If your valuation comes back lower than you expected, work to increase the value of your business before it's time to sell. Over 80% of all business owners plan to use the value of their business to fund their retirement. A current, updated valuation is crucial in this process.

Next, think about what kind of relationship you want with the business after you exit. Do you want to maintain an interest in the company? Do you want to stay on the payroll as a consultant? Would you rather cut all ties and never think about it again? Knowing where you want to land will help guide your exit plan.

Create manuals for management and employees that allow your successor to jump in and get acclimated relatively quickly. Be sure there are employees who can take over your responsibilities and that there are no tasks that only you know how to do.

Choosing a successor

Once you know the role you want to play, it's time to choose a successor. Broadly, your options are:

- Heirs: Transferring ownership to another family member is a popular choice. Whether it's your spouse, child, or someone else, think objectively about their abilities. Do they have the skills and financial capacity necessary to run the business and the desire to take
- Business partner: If you want to sell your interest in the business to your partner or partners, set up a buy-sell agreement based upon a current and updated valuation. A buy-sell agreement specifies when an owner can sell their interest, to whom they can sell and for how much.
- Employees: Selling to someone in management at the company can be a good way to ensure continuity in succession. Managers tend to have a good understanding of operations required to keep the business running smoothly. Transferring ownership to a group of employees is an option as well. An employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) can help. An ESOP is essentially a trust into which employees can put funds that convert to ownership shares later. Allowing employees an interest in the company's future may encourage them to do whatever they can now to help the business succeed.

• Third party. If your heirs or employees are not interested in taking over your business, you can sell to an outside buyer. Plan for this possibility well in advance, as this option can take a lot of time and effort as you search for a buyer and negotiate the terms of a sale. Newcomers may ask you to stay on with the company as a consultant for a short time to smooth the transition.

Updating your plan regularly

A succession plan is only useful if it's up to date. Set a regular schedule for reviewing your plan. As things change — say your chosen successor is no longer an optio n- update your succession plan accordingly. It can be the difference between the business succeeding under a new generation of leadership or ending with you. Sources:

Spotlight: Animal Health 6 signs your pet has dental issues

Metro Creative Graphics, Inc.

ets use body language and other cues to let their owners know how they are feeling. While certain actions, such as a vigorously wagging tail signaling that a dog is quite happy, are easy to read, it's not always so easy to determine how a pet is feeling.

Pet parents who are trying to provide the best care possible recognize that pets may make them aware of certain health issues. Diseases of the mouth may cause issues elsewhere in the body if left untreated. Fortunately for pet owners, dental issues are often easily recognized.

1. Halitosis

Bad breath is a strong indicator of a dental problem. Halitosis may stem from tooth decay and gum issues, as well as gastrointestinal problems. In either case, it's best to address a pet" bad breath with a veterinarian.

2. Visible problems

Take a peek inside of the pet's mouth. Animal Wellness magazine says that if there's a significant accumulation of tartar (yellow or brown patches on the tops of teeth along the gum line), or if the gums are inflamed and red, periodontal disease may be to blame.

Traces of blood in the mouth also can indicate that there is a problem.

Pets don't always like their mouths touched, so if your pet is being difficult, have a vet conduct a comprehensive oral health and treatment appointment (COHAT).

3. Refusing to

There are many reasons a pet may not want to eat, and a dental problem may be one of them.

Painful teeth and gums can make eating challenging, so the animal may avoid food. Refusing to eat can lead to weight loss and malnutrition, so it's best to nip this issue in the bud.

4. Sensitive mouth

Your pet may yelp, bite or scratch if you touch around the mouth area when there is a dental problem at play. Drooling excessively or dropping food from the mouth also are signs that things are awry.

5. Less grooming

Cats spend around 10 to 15 percent of their days grooming. Dental pain can make grooming challenging.

Therefore, if your cat is grooming less or looks unkempt, it may be due to dental problems. Great Vet says 85% of cats over the age of 3 have some form of dental disease.

6. Overgrowth

Rodents' incisors (front, gnawing teeth) grow continuously throughout their lives.

Typically the incisors receive continuous wear as the upper and lower incisors contact each other.

However, if incisors are misaligned, they may not wear down effectively. Some incisors can grow out of control, piercing the roof of the mouth and into the nasal cavity. If a rodent's teeth look long, that could warrant a vet check.

Pets can experience periodontal disease and other dental conditions. Staying aware of signs of dental issues can keep pets healthy.
