Remodeling setbacks at former middle school explained

Nick Johansen The Red Oak Express

The affordable housing project at the former Red Oak Middle School building is facing construction delays.

In October of 2018, the Red Oak School Board approved the sale of the building to Red Oak Partners LLC for $5,000. The conversion of the building started shortly after its permanent closure at the end of the 2019-20 school year. Plans at the time called for a 21-25 unit structure, with hopes to preserve the former middle school gym.

Chele Thornton is executive director of Builder's Development Corporation. Thornton said they were involved because due to the way Iowa structured tax credits, they had to come through a non-profit. To qualify for the funds, the project required an LLC, which was Red Oak Partners, a non-profit, which BDC filled, and Prairie Fire, who served as co-developer with BDC. Construction was handled by Prairie Fire Construction.

Thornton said almost immediately, the project ran into problems, and Thornton only recently moved into a position to be able to work through them.

"The project started in July 2020, which was right in the heart of the COVID-19 pandemic, though we were awarded the necessary tax credits in 2019. After the project moved through COVID, and we went through a couple of executive directors, I took over the role on Jan. 1 of this year, and I inher-ited this problem child," Thornton said. "I immediately started auditing this project. I'm an accountant by trade, and after I went through everything, I came to the conclusion that the project should be farther along than the other projects we have done in the past."

Thornton said after conversations with Prairie Fire Development Group, the organization overseeing the work on the project, the cause for the delays became clear.

"We had a meeting with Prairie Fire, and what it came down to was that their guv who was leading the project also had five other projects that because of COVID, had been delayed, and things just snowballed. Making things worse, the Red Oak project was the last project on their list, and they had others that were due and needed to be done because the tax credits [would] run out. He finally admitted that he couldn't continue on the project, so Prairie Fire Construction was let go," Thornton explained.

Making matters worse was the loss of key employees at Prairie Fire, and some instances where ego got in the

"We've done three projects with Prairie Fire and they've done fabulous work, but they lost one employee who couldn't work due to COVID, and the others left because other entities were offering everyone more money to work elsewhere, and couldn't be replaced. They instead tried to do it on their own, and I think pride gets in the way after you've done something for so long,' Thornton said. "Instead of asking for help, things just got out of control. There's blame to go around, including with BDC. We had a couple of executive directors that just kind of laid down on this a little bit because they've done so many projects before, and it's all gone well. I'd say this is a project where things just fell through every crack. "

After confirming that Prairie Fire Construction was unable to complete the project, Thornton said they immediately went out and sought the services of Merit Construction of Cedar Rapids, to get a complete scope on where the project stood today.

"Merit Construction representatives came out and identified what had been done, what hadn't been done, and how much it would cost to complete the project. Unfortunately, costs for construction materials have gone through the roof. The cost of the windows alone are an additional $1 million, and we had a hard date of Oct. 31 to complete the project due to the tax credits involved,"

Efforts are underway to find new funding sources for the low-income housing project at the Red Oak Middle School. Work on the existing project must be completed by Oct. 31 to maintain the existing tax credits. (Nick Johansen/The Red Oak Express) commented Thornton.

While a lot of the remaining aspects of the project are mainly finishing work, as all the sheet rocking has been placed in the third floor, and partially in the second floor, work remained to be completed in the gymnasium and auditorium, and the project has all but exhausted its existing budget. A potential source for the remaining funding for the project was through American Rescue Plan Act funding, but Thornton said attempts to secure it ran into roadblocks from the governor's office.

"We met all the approvals for the funding prior to it being sent for approval at the governor's office, and the request for funding was denied by the governor. We were devastated. When we asked why, it was stated that verbiage in the act that the costs had to occur after March of 2021. Even though the project costs we are facing occurred after that date, we were told that the project started prior to that date, and we did not qualify," stated Thornton.

An attempt to get the governor's office to change its stance on the funding was attempted, and the request was denied a second time, leaving BDC in the tough position of using alternate options to collect the necessary funding to complete the project on time, or try for a different date.

"We're pursuing every avenue we can think of, but we may be in a position where we have to scrap the tax credits we have now, and reapply with another entity, start all over, and finish the project, but no matter what, we are committed to finishing the project," advised Thornton. "If you know of anyone that has funding, let us know who to contact, because we want and need to finish this project, there are people here in the town that have worked on the project that need to be paid, and frankly, it's a mess. There's no excuse on our part as the owners of the property, there's no excuse on the contractors that failed us, and we may have to sue their insurance to get more money. We don't know, but we're going to use every avenue we can."

Another hurdle being faced is that while communications with Rep. Cindy Axne's office have identified federal funding sources that would have been beneficial to the project, the deadline to apply for those funds has passed. Still, Thornton said they are going to do everything they can to find the necessary funding to meet the Oct. 31 deadline, rather than be forced to scrap the project and try again.

"We've got people who leased the units and have been ready to move in for a long while, and we absolutely want to get this project done for them in October, if we can, because they've been waiting long enough."

Food safety training available for home based vendors and farmers markets

ISU Extension

Selling food to the public is a big responsibility. Numerous state and federal laws are in place to keep the public safe and assure that important food safety protocols are followed. However, navigating all of the dos and don'ts can be a challenge. Depending on what exactly is being sold, and how much, many Iowa food vendors may be exempt from state licensing and federal requirements. But knowing the requirements and best practices is still wise. Since joining Iowa State University Extension and Outreach in 2015, Shannon Coleman has worked diligently to help educate and train Iowans who sell food to the public, about what they need to know. "Iowa has very specific rules about what can and cannot be sold at the farmers markets and to the public without a license," said Coleman, an assistant professor in food science and human nutrition and extension human sciences specialist at Iowa State University. "Sometimes the producer or food vendor just needs some basic guidance."

in the laboratory, and through her extension work, she provides continuing education to the industry. She is a regular voice at the annual Iowa Farmers Market Association conference in February, and her fact sheets and publications can be found yourself from selling unsafe foods," said Coleman.

She enjoys teaching food vendors what they need to know, and seeing them adapt food safety practices they may not have considered before.

"I like watching the 'aha

New programming

In 2017, she worked with graduate student Leah (Gilman) Reever to develop fact sheets and in-person training that helped instruct food vendors about the rules, but Coleman quickly discovered that more convenient education was needed.

Coleman described the pilot in-person offering as a "a starter conversation with the industry. It was standing room only at every location. We actually had a waiting list of people who wanted to participate."

In 2019, working with graduate student Tarah Temen, Coleman developed a pilot program that offered online food safety training related to the Iowa law on exempt home food operators and home bakeries. It's known as the "Home-based Food Operators: Regulations and Food Safety Course."

The voluntary course has been offered ever since and today is available online every day of the year or in person by request, for $35. The course consists of six modules related to home-based food vendors and bakeries in Iowa.

The course covers Iowa policies and regulations, food safety basics, foodborne pathogens, foods that do and do not require temperature control, and safe production and preparation practices. The online course is available in Moodle, an online learning management system.

All documents and curriculum will be updated this year to match new regulations being developed in Iowa.

State partners

Coleman works closely with the Iowa Department of Inspections and Appeals to make sure the curriculum is current and applicable.

Kurt Rueber, inspector with the Iowa Department of Inspections and Appeals, said it's been a pleasure to work with Coleman and other members of the Iowa State Food Safety Team.

"She has been at the tip of the spear helping out not only the producers and the industry, but also the students," said Rueber. "It's a team effort and I'm delighted that we have such a close connection."

As an assistant professor, Coleman teaches students about food science and food safety at farmers markets across Iowa. In addition to the Home Based Food Operators course, Coleman also helps administer in-person Produce Safety Alliance Training, which explains the requirements of the federal Food Safety Modernization Act. For $20, participants get an update on FSMA and what they need to do to comply.

Donna Brahms, past president of the Iowa Farmers Market Association, said Coleman's efforts have gone a long way toward educating small-scale producers and food vendors.

"Shannon is a really good example of how to get information to the people who need it," said Brahms, who operates 3 Bee Farms in southwest Iowa with her family. "The trainings Shannon provides are very necessary to what we do and I've taken them myself."

Being proactive

Brahms sells at six farmers markets a week, and said vendors need to educate themselves if they're going to be selling a food product. Even if the product is exempt from a license requirement, Brahms said it's still a good idea to take the training and know the best practices of handling foods.

Prevention is the key, and Colemans training helps arm vendors with the knowledge they need to prevent food safety issues.

"If you know what you need to do in advance, you can keep moment'," said Coleman, "You can do an instruction here in the classroom but when you do an interactive activity and you see them actually connect the dots, that is the most rewarding part."A full list of food safety training opportunities and Standard Operating Procedures is available on the ISU Extension and Outreach Human Sciences website. Participants can register for food safety training on the same website. Additional food safety resources for Iowa are also available on the Iowa Food Protection Task Force.

Their Board has pending financial assistance from Hotel/Motel grant monies that are identified for this project but those funds must be spent by September 2022 or they will lose the funding, unless the Hotel/Motel Committee authorizes some more extension time. Construction is planned for late fall, after the summer events are completed in the downtown area. This project is the last major piece of the 2012 downtown master plan. Some funding assistance is needed from the Council. If Hotel/Motel money is still available the request is for $75,000. If the Hotel/Motel money is not available the request is for $125,000. No the sum of $59,944.34 with interest at

Lester Navs: None Motion Carried. Mayor advised of availability of Brownfield Redevelopment Funding. There is money available through DNR and EPS for Phase 1 & Phase 2, for any contaminants, such as lead, mold, asbestos. She stated funds available to do those and then if awarded they move to Phase 2, with no costs to us and no match. Also, technical assistance grants with K State and can get help with nuisance properties. Once the nuisance is cleaned up, then can apply for redevelopment grants. An inventory assessment does not need to have a project in mind. Councilperson Fridolph advised he had telephoned Danielle with SWIPCO to clarify how city could pay if we sign a contract for a comprehensive plan with them. Contract can be signed but payment next fiscal year or monthly payments can be made. Discussion then continued among Mayor and Council about its purpose and city's commitment at this time. Mayor stated that housing assessment is one piece of the comp plan but electric/ water/vehicle charging all need looked at. There was feeling that more data is needed from the Housing Readiness study and Community Heart & Soul. No action at this time and will be back on next agenda. Housing Readiness Assessment Steering Committee plans to have a kick-off meeting in a couple of weeks. Members of the Committee and their representation category include: ^k Andrew Nostvick – Rental/Renter * Marty Barnett - Realtor

Councilperson Fridolph is still coordinating information on the city's website. Councilperson Fridolph explained he put together a draft of an annual performance evaluation and employment agreements for council appointed positions for Council to review and consider. These drafts were included in council packets. No action taken. Community Heart & Soul now has a core team of 8 members: Cvnthia Bangston, Robina Courtney, Ashley Soats, James Norris, Tim Fridolph, Evon Carlson, Karen Blue, and Tracy Vannausdle. They are working on grant application to get submitted next week. Cynthia Bangston plans to attend the Red Oak Heritage Foundation Board meeting to ask them to be a fiscal partner with the Red Oak Community Heart & Soul.

Chele Thorton, Executive Director for Business Developers Corp. (BDC) gave an update on the Red Oak Middle School Housing project. October 31 is their goal of project completion. Working with the historical aspect of the building. Looking for other funding sources for assistance. Councilperson Fridolph, Bills, and
