Sallach brings some color to RO’s downtown square

Nick Johansen

Planter boxes on the Red Oak downtown square are starting to get a colorful overhaul.

The downtown planter painting project, which is being done through the Red Oak Arts Destination group, got underway in early August. Hoskinson said ROAD has been getting submissions from local artists of all ages and suggestions from others.

“We started the project with the planter at the intersection of Third and Coolbaugh as it is the most visible for those entering the downtown business district from the west. The design was submitted by graduating Red Oak High School senior Gannon Sallach,” Hoskinson said

The project began with cleaning the exterior of the planter box and then a special commercial primer for concrete. The base background colors were applied and the layers of detail began on Aug. 6 by artists Gannon Sallach, Brinkly Sallach and Ashley Schmid, with Jim Hoskinson assisting. Hoskinson is a co-project director with Phillip Lamb.

Sallach, who graduated from Red Oak High School earlier this year, said he’s always had a passion for art, though he’s only recently expanded into painting.

“I’ve always loved to draw, sketch, and paint, if I feel like it. I do a lot of digital work as well, so I’ve always enjoyed drawing stuff,” Sallach said.

Sallach said he was a bit surprised when he discovered his artistic design was the first one chosen by ROAD.

“I saw the post on Facebook, and I thought it would be a cool opportunity to have some fun and make a little design. When they later reached out to me and said they had selected my design, I decided that I was really going to dive into it and really go for it,” commented Sallach.

Sallach wanted his design to have a historical significance to Red Oak and researched online and at various businesses and organizations around the town to find a theme that was a key part of Red Oak’s past.

“I came across the original name of the town, which was Red Oak Junction, and because of the railroads that had come in to town, the city really expanded because of that, so I wanted the main focal point of the design to be railroad tracks, in order to tie back to the town’s history,” Sallach explained.

To help add color and brightness to the design, Sallach said he researched flowers from the area.

“I found that the area had the prairie rose, and the cornflower, and other colorful flowers, so I added them to the design and painted them in order to contrast from the grays and the browns of the railroad tracks,” Sallach said.

Sallach added that he’s had lots of support, including help from his family, to get the planter box painted.

“Jim Hoskinson has been helping me basically through the entire thing, and my sister, Brinkly Sallach and her friend, Ashley Schmid, both came down and helped out for a couple of days. If it was

The Red Oak Child Development Center is heading into its third year of operation and continues to keep on growing.

The facility opened its doors in August 2020 with licensing for 75 kids, but that number soon started growing. Director Jacque Howell said since that opening, the facility has continued to work out ways to boost its enrollment.

“When we opened, we thought things would be slow, and it would take time to fill our classrooms. That was not the case. Within a few months of our opening, we were redoing some of our rooms and changing our licensing to add to our enrollment due to demand, because shortly after opening, we were already full,” Howell said. “We initially increased our enrollment to 125, and then earlier this year, we had to up it again and now we’re licensed for 145 kids, and even then we have very few spots available. Our current enrollment is at 135 kids. Sometimes it’s scary to think about what families were doing before we opened our doors.”

When they first opened, Howell said they never realized how big the center was going to get, nor that it would possibly need to keep getting bigger.

“I was an in-home child care provider, and I knew that the need was there. I was, and still am, passionate about making childcare more affordable and providing more of it, but never in a million years did I think we’d grow this fast, or that I would be overseeing this many kids and staff, but it’s an awesome problem to have,” Howell stated.

Currently, around 25 kids are on the waiting list for the center. In order to keep upping the enrollment, Howell said the facility has been doing lots of renovations to expand and create new space.

“We started out with four classrooms, and in May

Sorensen appointed city attorney

Nick Johansen
The Red Oak Express

The Red Oak City Council has agreed to a replacement to serve as the city’s attorney.

The move was required following a letter from current City Attorney Tom Stamets that stated Stamets and Josiah Wearin, who own Stamets & Wearin P.C., had decided to close on December 30. Stamets has served as the city’s attorney for roughly 20 years.

Red Oak city administrator Brad Wright said in the wake of Stamets’ retirement announcement, Shenandoah attorney Bri Sorensen, who is currently employed on an as-needed basis by the city while handling nuisance property enforcement matters, was interested in taking over as the city’s attorney. If appointed, Sorensen said her billing practice would remain the same, a monthly retainer, with an hourly rate.

“I’ve talked with Tom and Bri both, and certainly it would be my recommendation to appoint Bri to fill that position. Tom’s recommendation would be for the appointment to be effective Oct. 1, so we would have some time for transition,” Wright said. “Tom has a number of files that either need to be transferred or destroyed, and Bri would need to be brought up to date on some of the legal matters that Tom has been involved with over the years.”

Councilperson Brian Bills asked if the best course of action would be for the city to issue a request for proposal for the position.

“I appreciate everything that Bri has done, but I think at this point it would be nice if we could hire someone local,” Bills said.

Wright advised the council that there wasn’t a local attorney in Red Oak who could be hired.

“We have two firms in town. One is in conflict because they’re a magistrate, and the other is in conflict because they’re a county attorney. I’ve talked with the police chief, fire chief, and nuisance officer, and all were in agreement that they hoped Bri would continue to work for us,” Wright explained.

In addition to Sorensen, Stamets sent a list of additional names. When asked by the council, Stamets said he felt Bri would be a good choice as his replacement, and that he submitted the list upon request. While he was comfortable recommending anyone on the list, Stamets said he simply made the list, and hadn’t contacted any of the other suggested candidates to see if they were interested in taking the post.

After hearing the information that there was no other local attorney available to take the position, Bills said his stance had changed.

“I came to the meeting definitely thinking we needed an RFP, but now I’m feeling like we can simply proceed with the appointment. My only issue was exporting money to an attorney outside of town,” commented Bills.

The other members of the council were in agreement with Bills’ stance. The council agreed to appoint Sorensen as the city’s attorney, effective Oct. 1.

The council also agreed to proceed with hiring the Southwest Iowa Planning Council to update to the city’s comprehensive plan. Wright said a simple approval of the proposal was all that was needed.

“According to SWIPCO, they agreed to hold off on payment until next July,” advised Wright.

The council unanimously approved the proposal from SWIPCO for the updated plan.

of 2022, we brought our total rooms to eight. Thankfully, we've gotten a lot of grant dollars that have paid for all the classrooms, updated the gym, the bathrooms, and the furnishings. We've been able to secure hundreds of thousands of dollars of grant funds to be able to do all these renovations, which has been wonderful," Howell commented.

While all the funding has been a big help, now they're out of available space to expand to, and Howell said they could afford to expand further.

"Each month can be very different. When we first opened, we had a need to take in more infants to our enrollment, so we have two infant rooms. Then it moved to needing two rooms for our one-year-olds, so we have two of those rooms in addition to our two infant rooms," said Howell. "This summer, we realized we had a need to expand space for our school-aged children. This year, we were at capacity for our school-aged children. It goes to show that the demand changes year to year. We're anticipating when school starts up, the two-year-old room will get super full. Hopefully someday, we can get two rooms for each grade level we serve. In the immediate future, my goal would be to add a school-aged room for the kids we have."

Even though available space is pretty much taken, Howell said they are still discussing options through a partnership with Building Crafts, and Jeff Soe, and Daric O'Neal with Alley Poyner Maccietto Arcitecture.

"I work with Jeff Soe quite a bit, and Daric O'Neal has done a big layout for us. We have an idea of how to expand, and are working towards that, but it is simply a matter of getting the grant funding. We also have a good partnership with the Red Oak School District which allows us to keep going so strong," Howell explained. "Daric O'Neal's layout works from the inside, and allows us to utilize what is in the building already, that could maybe be repurposed in a different way, and potentially adding to the building out towards the playground area. So we know we need to expand, we're just waiting to get the funds we need."

Another snag in expansion is that most of the grant funds they have received have been for renovating rooms, but many of them don't allow for modifications of the physical structure. Other available funds would require the center to partner with local businesses, but then the business would have to apply for the funds, rather than the center, which slows up the process and is making it harder to secure the necessary funding needs. Renovations would also require approval from the Red Oak School Board.

Assistant director Tasha Vestal said the center was very important for the development of children in their formative years.

"There are studies that say the first five years are the most important years in a child's life for brain development. When you think about it, they're not going into the school district until they're four, so they're only getting one year for that type of development once they get to school age," Vestal stated.

Howell added each of the rooms does lesson planning and those lessons are reviewed and approved by Vestal. In the early years, the focus is mainly on playing and learning routines, which is very important. Another plus for the facility is that it isn't facing the staff shortages plaguing area school districts.

"When we have the perfect amount of staff for ratio, we consider ourselves understaffed. Each one of our rooms only needs two employees, and we have three in each room, just so they can get that necessary attention. In our one-year-old room, where the kids are learning to communicate and play with their friends, you need those extra hands to make sure they're getting exactly what they need," advised Howell.

Currently, they have 32 staff members, and a third candidate was in line to make the total 33. Another way the center keeps its staffing numbers from being short, Vestal said, is that the facility is always hiring.

"We never stop, so that we avoid any potential shortfalls. If we have a great candidate, but we don't need them right at the moment, we'll still take them and find a place for them so they can be an extra person and take over if one of the staff decides to leave us," said Vestal.

Currently, the facility has a level two Quality Rating Improvement System, or a QRS. That system will be known starting this year as Iowa Quality for Kids, and as the center moves into its third year, Howell said they are working towards a level three rating in the new IQ4K.

"It requires much more additional training and will require approval for some overtime, since our staff is scheduled 40 hours a week in the classroom, and that doesn't leave much spare time for training. Still, everyone is wanting us to get up to that four or five rating, which will continue to require a lot of training. Also, the higher the rating the more funding we'll be eligible for. I really think it's possible, and I think there will be 100% support for us to get all of the required trainings,"

Howell commented.

Also, Howell said the center will continue to be looking at ways to keep expanding.

"If and when we do an expansion, it would take our licensing to 175 total kids. That's a number that I'd feel comfortable with. That number won't overwork the staff, and I think if we expand beyond an enrollment of 175 kids, it might require a second director and assistant director. So 175 kids total is the goal," Howell said.

Howell expressed her appreciation for all the support the facility received from the Red Oak School District and the school board.

"We are so grateful for their support, because without them, who knows if this ever would have been a go. They're completely supportive, and we share a lot of stuff with them," advised Howell.

Deadline soon for Montgomery County fall grant program

The Montgomery County Community Foundation, working in partnership with the Red Oak Heritage Foundation, reminds Montgomery County nonprofits that the deadline to apply for grant funds is Thursday, Sept. 1. Applications are currently being accepted online for the fall grant cycle, with $34,200 available to support Montgomery County nonprofit organizations and community projects.

Full application details, helpful resources, and a link to the application form can be found online by selecting Montgomery County under County Listing at swiowa-foundations.org. Applications will only be accepted through the online system.

Only organizations providing services in Montgomery County are eligible to apply. They must be able to demonstrate broad community/county support and be an IRS-approved 501(c)(3) public charity, a local municipality, or a fiscally sponsored project. For fall 2022, the Montgomery County Community Foundation will entertain requests for capital and program support. Requests for general operating support will not be considered.

Please contact Stacey Goodman (stacey@omahafoundation.org) or Sydney Calcagno (sydney@omahafoundation.org) at 800-794-3458 with application-related questions. All completed grant applications will be considered at the October board meeting, with applicants being notified of funding decisions by the end of October.

DO YOU REMEMBER WHEN...?

Archived from 2017, 2012, 1997, and 1972 editions of The Red Oak Express

5 Years Ago

Residents of Red Oak, and around the world, were prepping for a very special event. A total solar eclipse was going to take place in several states, including a number of locations in Missouri. In Montgomery County itself, a partial eclipse was seen. Only one mile from the state of Iowa, south of Hamburg, was in the path of the total solar eclipse. The last total solar eclipse had taken place nearly four decades ago, in 1979. A total eclipse hadn’t been viewed in the state of Iowa since 1954. Not much was happening in the way of sports, with local athletes falling into daily workouts and practice schedules. Waverly Brown was keeping her eyes on the ball at volleyball practice in Stanton. Red Oak’s Carter Maynes was keeping busy with football practice drills.

10 Years Ago

The 2012 Classy Chassis Car Show was featuring three generations of the Stanley family. Jerry, Jim, and William Stanley, father, son, and grandson, respectively, were all going to be showing their cars at the 2012 show. The Stanleys claimed they shared two passions: cars and sarcasm. Jerry and Jim had been members of the club since its inception in 1977. William was a member by association. Jerry’s vehicle showing was a 1951 Ford Victoria. Jim was showing a 1969 Chevy Caprice, and William’s car of choice was a 2004 Chevy 2500 HD. Red Oak Volleyball Head Coach Angie Montgomery and assistant coach Sharon Allison led a second through fourth grade volleyball camp at the Montgomery County Family YMCA. There were 50 participants.

25 Years Ago

It had been two years since Red Oak’s Eveready plant produced its final battery. Since that time, the building had been the target of a nationwide search for a new owner. Red Oak Industrial Foundation executive director Steve Adams said the building was the subject of the most aggressive advertising and marketing campaign in the foundation’s history. The costs of advertising were covered by a $30,000 grant from the Economic Development Administration of the U.S. Department of Commerce. Kevin Hallquist of Stanton collected prizes for his first career ace at the Red Oak County Club. Hallquist also became the seventh member of the country club’s Century Club for his hole in one. A 1996 Mercury Mystique GS with 19,000 miles was $10,500 at Wyman’s Ford of Griswold.

50 Years Ago

The Starcraft Agri-Products Division of Starcraft Company, Goshen, Ind., announced its decision to begin construction on a new livestock equipment manufacturing plant at a site at the intersection of Highways 34 and 48 in Red Oak. The building and equipment required a capital investment of roughly $800,000. The plant was planned to employ 35 employees full time, with growth to 75 employees projected. Jim Wyman of Griswold was the second place finisher in the 50-lap Midwest Late Model Championship at the Shelby County Speedway, before capturing first place in the main event at the Adams County Speedway. A nine-month subscription to the Red Oak Express for college students was available for $7.50.

SWCC trio honored at Community Colleges for Iowa Banquet

Southwestern Community College employees Terri Higgins and Jeff Magnuson, along with board member Jerry Smith, were recently honored at the Community Colleges for Iowa Banquet at Western Iowa Tech Community College in Sioux City.

The banquet, held July 21 in the Rocklin Conference Center on Western Iowa Tech's campus, included a dinner and program emceed by Emily Shields, executive director of the Community Colleges of Iowa. The program recognized outstanding faculty and staff from each of Iowa's 15 community colleges.

Higgins, director of marketing and enrollment management at SWCC, and Magnuson, auto collision repair/refinish instructor, were recognized as SWCC's outstanding faculty and staff award winners.

Higgins and Magnuson were nominated for the awards by the Southwestern board of trustees. Shields presented Higgins and Magnuson with their awards and read excerpts from the nominations.

This marked the first time the awardees included one outstanding staff member and one outstanding faculty member from each college.

McGuire-Welch presented Smith with the Quarter Century Award, for serving on SWCC's board for 25 years.

RO native Brockshus joins DMACC

There will be some familiar faces in different roles in DMACC's Horticulture Program this fall. Jim Mason, who became a full-time horticulture instructor in 2017 is now an associate professor and Horticulture Department Chair. DMACC Horticulture program graduate Diane Brockshus is returning to DMACC as a full-time horticulture instructor.

Brockshus, originally from Red Oak, enrolled in DMACC's horticulture program in 2015, after spending 14 years working for the Iowa Department of Natural Resources as an environmental regulator.

THE TIME CAPSULE | ROY MARSHALL

From squash to flight training

An article making our front page in November of 1947 had to do with a shipment of 270 sacks of potatoes that arrived at Red Oak's school. Each sack contained 100 pounds.

A total of 27,000 pounds of actual potatoes being peeled and cooked in school kitchens causes me to wonder if those places still peel and cook? Has the school lunch potato been replaced with something commercially processed, fried in oil, loaded with salt, frozen and converted to heat-and-eat fast-food?

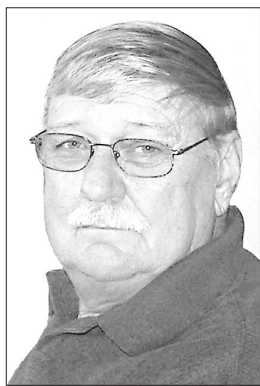

Whatever the case now, in 1947 schools serving a meal that included traditional potato dishes must have been an incentive for non-participating schools to get on board. Of them there were quite a few.

Country schools still dotted our landscape, but were usually too small to employ a kitchen staff and meet standards required by the government. Other schools, especially in small towns, held back.

In those post-war years many were simply so full of students that finding space for a kitchen was a problem.

A few contrary parents and school administrators felt mothers could do a better job of making decisions on their children's nutrition than the government.

Some argued the program wasted taxpayer's money, citing bureaucratic inefficiency and huge amounts of food that was thrown away.

Others resisted because they saw the program as a lure for parents to concede another responsibility to a government that had already grown tremendously under FDR.

The program wasn't mandatory, though, and there was a fee. Those who preferred could continue sending their kids to school with a sack lunch or make whatever arrangements they wanted.

Stanton held off until 1951, then installed a kitchen that passed the government inspection. They hired cooks and began receiving those hundred-pound sacks of potatoes, half-pint cartons of milk and an endless supply of surplus peanut butter.

Swedes are inclined to skepticism, and there was grumbling. Bernie Wickstrom, editor of the Stanton Viking, heard both sides and decided to go undercover for a bit of investigative reporting. Dressing down with a sweater and bluejeans to pose as a student, he arrived at the right time of day, got in line and bought a lunch ticket.

Given his age and demeanor we doubt Wickstrom could have passed for a high schooler anyway, and in a town the size of Stanton the kids knew nearly everyone.

A newspaper editor, who also covered high school sports, was among the most recognizable people in town. Wickstrom was a humorist, though, and his article was written as if the disguise worked.

He issued a glowing report. The kitchen was spotless and the food was excellent. His nicely balanced meal included a side dish favored by Scandinavians—scaloped potatoes bubbling hot from the oven.

The entree, salad, vegetable and dessert were prepared by two cooks, both neatly attired in matching blue nylon dresses and red plastic aprons. When Wickstrom was there those two ladies were cooking for, then serving and cleaning up after, 111 students and teachers (high school girls usually helped during the rush hour).

He concluded his editorial by noting that at least some schools in 92 of Iowa's 99 counties were in the program, and he felt they'd made a good decision.

Two years later a high school student named Nancy Honette wrote an article that Wickstrom printed in his Viking. Honette gave a description of school lunches as the program was in 1953.

On Oct. 8, the meal was mashed potatoes smothered in shredded roast beef and pan gravy, buttered beets, applesauce and the old standbys of milk, bread and butter.

The fare on October 7 was to Honette's liking as well; tossed salad, tuna and noodle casserole, sandwich made with what she declared was the creamiest peanut butter to be found, cold milk and warm cherry cobbler.

The number of Stanton students and teachers participating had increased from 111 to 150 in two years.

Mashed potatoes, Miss Honette reported, were made with the aid of a recent addition; a new 20-quart potato masher. I've no idea what a 5-gallon potato masher is, but it must have been a welcome acquisition as the same two cooks, Edith Larson and Edla Veseen, still did the peeling, cooking, blending, serving, cleanup and whatever it took to serve 150.

What Wickstrom would write if he could pass through security to drop in on a school lunch of today, then compare it with the made-from-scratch roast beef, mashed potatoes, gravy, casseroles and vegetables of the 1950s, we don't know.

We do know there's an interesting comparison to be made between obesity rates of kids then and now.

With that in mind, anyone up for a corn dog? Walking taco? Slab of reheated pizza?

Norris issues comments after Summit Carbon presentation to board of supervisors

To the Editor:

This week the Montgomery County Board of Supervisors heard a presentation by Summit Carbon Solutions on their proposed pipeline project that wants to seize or acquire property down 18 miles of western Montgomery County.

The Summit team is making the rounds to the approximate 30 counties in Iowa on the proposed route. Their goal is to dazzle counties with promises of big money. Before we get all caught up in dollar signs, let's remember what we would be trading:

- This will be Summit's first carbon pipeline project - we will be their fledgling venture
- These pipelines are dangerous - the permit they are seeking from the Iowa Utilities Board is for a hazardous liquid pipeline
- In fact, following an investigation of a 2020 rupture that permanently disabled some local residents, PHMSA (the pipeline regulatory agency) is currently in the process of defining safety regulations for CO₂ pipelines and will not have guidelines for a couple more years.
- How are counties like ours supposed to make decisions to protect the life and livelihood of our residents? We have a right to know what we are dealing with.

- Landowners are opposed to this project throughout the 2000 mile route - the timeline has already had to be moved back because voluntary easements are not being signed as projected.
- Summit is asking for the ability to seize property through eminent domain because they know they cannot obtain 100% voluntary easements
- Montgomery County will need to spend money on this project. How many roads will they cross, damage, or impact? What additional emergency equipment and training will be necessary?
- Careful documentation will need to be conducted in order to protect our property owners, which will require the county additional work and potential staff.

So before we believe Summit, who has demonstrated time and time again that they are not forthcoming, let's ask where these figures came from. When another county inquired with the State Dept of Revenue, they replied Summit had not contacted them. No formula has even been established yet. So the inflated and misleading figures given Tuesday are Summit's "best guess." In fact, they may be using the same accounting firm the Dakota Access Pipeline used that was proven to be "not even close."

If Summit is confident these figures are accurate, you would be able to use them in budgeting.

But earlier this year when they gave big figures to our northern neighbors, their response was that they could not use these numbers to set their budget.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Supervisor Mike Olson said he appreciated folks showing up, but there is nothing Montgomery County can do. True, the decision to grant a hazardous liquid pipeline permit is solely that of the Iowa Utilities Board and they will grant or reject the use of eminent domain as well, but there is action Montgomery County can take in addition to filing their official objection to the use of eminent domain.

Cities and counties can pass local ordinances to protect its infrastructure, citizens, and employees. Olson said the state could override whatever was passed locally. I suppose that is technically correct, but then why did Montgomery County just pass a solar ordinance? Why will the Planning & Zoning Commission be working on a wind ordinance? Couldn't the same be said for any local ordinance?

Putting an effective and reasonable pipeline ordinance in place is prudent. Many other counties have plans to do so as well. Moratoriums have already passed in McPherson, Hyde, Moody, Spink & Brown counties in South Dakota. https://www.aberdeennews.com/story/news/local/2022/07/12/brown-county-likely-consider-co-2-pipeline-

morum-resolution/10031247002/?utm_source=substack&utm_medium=email

<https://dakotafreepress.com/2022/07/20/brown-spink-join-counties-saying-no-to-carbon-dioxide-pipeline-hand-county-withdraws-from-fight/>

Below is an example of what a county on the pipeline route in North Dakota is doing. They are not unique. Counties all along the route are considering similar action. The Emmons County, North Dakota, Commission passed two motions to update requirements for being granted an industrial conditional use permit: Any necessary easements from landowners must be voluntary; and the fee for the permit has been changed to 3% of the total project cost. <https://www.agweek.com/news/north-dakota-county-throws-100-voluntary-easement-mandate-135-million-fee-at-summit-carbon-pipeline>

I hope Montgomery County will give protecting us with a local ordinance the same consideration as our neighboring counties and states.

RO School hosting special Tigerpalooza event

The Red Oak Activities Department and the Red Oak Athletic Boosters are inviting all area businesses to participate in “Tigerpalooza” on Aug. 22. The activities department will host a community pep rally that day.

The “Tigerpalooza” event is all about bringing the community together and encouraging community members to shop and eat local, then continue the community support by attending the pep rally.

In order to ensure the event is a success, the district is requesting that businesses that are interested in participating in the event establish a deal or discount for customers throughout the “Tigerpalooza” day. All participating businesses and corresponding specials and the community pep rally information would be promoted throughout the community.

Anyone interested in participating in the event is asked to fill out a form at docs.google.com/forms/d/e/1FAIpQLSeKwStFTXU8k2VqkZuLxDCZZomJ2pedjK6m-REM6lkeNLVzA/viewform.

The district needs the list of businesses who wish to participate in the event by Aug. 18. The Red Oak School District will begin promoting the specials on Aug. 19, and participating businesses and details will be shared via email and social media.

Basket weaving demonstration in Corning

The Corning Center for Fine Arts at 706 Davis Ave, Corning, is hosting a natural basket weaving demonstration with artist Sandy Maxa from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 20.

Traditionally, a basket would be made because it was needed to carry, cook or store something. That basket was made from whatever fibers could be gathered where the basket maker lived.

The public is invited to come and see some of the baskets that Sandy Maxa has created using materials gathered here in Southwest Iowa.

Those who attend will also see a demonstration of one of the techniques she employs to make a basket.

Both adults and children would enjoy this demonstration, which includes a free admission.

Maxa is an artist who currently resides in Lenox.

Happy Birthday!

Celebrating birthdays are:

Supervisors discuss candidates for safety coordinator

Nick Johansen
The Red Oak Express

The Montgomery County Board of Supervisors will soon act on a replacement safety coordinator.

At the regular supervisors meeting Aug. 9, Supervisors Chairman Mark Peterson discussed where they were in the search so far.

"I know we have a possible job description, and those have been shared among the county staff. We just need to determine how many hours per week the position entails," Peterson said.

Supervisor Donna Robinson said she asked outgoing safety coordinator Beth Peterson how many hours the job required, and whether five hours per week was a good estimate. Robinson said the response was that the hours could vary.

"Beth told me that it completely depends on what is needed at the time. If things are running smoothly, and there are no issues, it would take less than five hours to do per week. However, if something happens and someone has a claim, there's paperwork involved and the hours can go up, so they could probably go weeks with very little to do, and then other weeks there may be more work required," explained Robinson.

According to Robinson, they set up a safety board several years ago, which Robinson was a part of, and they reduced the board from 14 members to seven. The board met quarterly, allowing for the county to keep up with guidelines that were imposed by the state. She also had some ideas for Peterson's replacement.

"The meetings were usually brief, mainly just updates. It didn't require a lot of work. I have made a couple of suggestions for a new safety coordinator. One of those people was Jim Richardson. I told him that if we don't take action, or if he's not comfortable yet in making a decision to apply for the post, I'd like to sit down with him and have some discussions, and invite Brian Hamman, who is a past safety coordinator, and take the opportunity to go over the role," said Robinson.

Richardson joined the Montgomery County Secondary Roads department in 2017 as a designer and inspector. Richardson said he welcomed the opportunity to sit down and discuss the position.

"I have been researching the post and seeing what the plans are, and I do feel like I need some more time to think about it. I feel the course of action being suggested is exactly what we need to do," commented Richardson.

Peterson said he had also had inquiries from people who already worked for the county, and who were interested in the post, but were waiting to see what the job description entailed.

Robinson said there had also been discussions about the safety coordinator be someone who worked for the secondary roads department, or the sheriff's office, due to the types of claims received.

"When we have safety issues or incidents, nine times out of 10 they're either from the secondary roads office, or the sheriff's office, which makes sense as they are the employees who are going out and doing a lot more physical work, as opposed to just sitting at a desk," said Robinson.

Peterson declined to name the employees who had expressed an interest, but said they were members of the secondary roads department and the sheriff's office.

"Those departments are definitely some of the bigger departments for the county, and I would agree they most regularly deal with safety issues," stated Peterson.

The supervisors were in agreement with the job description for the position. It was decided to share the description with Richardson and the other two interested applicants.

With multiple persons interested in the post, the supervisors also agreed to have sit-down interviews with the applicants with two supervisors present, and then make a final choice for the safety coordinator from those interviews.

Further discussion on the position is expected at a future board of supervisors meeting.

Supervisors hear Summit Carbon project update

Nick Johansen
The Red Oak Express

The Montgomery County Board of Supervisors was given a presentation by Summit Carbon Solutions representatives regarding the proposed carbon pipeline project.

The supervisors opened the meeting with a public comment period, and heard comments from local residents regarding the project. The first to speak was Tom Honeyman from Emerson. Honeyman once again expressed his opposition to not only the project, but the use of eminent domain on private individuals.

"Despite the fairy tales that Summit will spin for you, your responsibility is for the safety of life, livestock, and land in the county. I urge you to plan for the worst scenario, as it will likely happen. If something goes wrong, it will have to be repaired, and the taxpayers will pay for it, and that tax will have to be levied on property. Regardless of the property tax charge being paid by Summit, it will not cover the cost of what the county will endure if the pipeline is put through the county," Honeyman said.

Jonette Otte, who has a Henderson address but lives in Montgomery County, also addressed the board. Otte requested the county's zoning board to research an ordinance concerning the proposed carbon pipeline.

"We don't know what can happen in the future with carbon pipelines, but we do know the pipeline construction can permanently damage the land and threaten waterways. They seek to use eminent domain for private profit, and redirect tax dollars away from known climate solutions. Many of us have already said no to Summit. The pipelines can be dangerous to communities and animals," advised Otte.

The supervisors then heard from Kaylee Langrell from Turnkey Logistics, who also represent Summit Carbon Solutions. Langrell said they wanted to share an update on the status of the project thus far, and discuss the goal of the project itself.

"Currently 57% of the corn sold in Iowa goes to ethanol plants. Once the pipeline project is completed, the ethanol plants will be able to sell into growing markets that we expect to continue to grow, and the corn producer will be able to sell their corn at a premium," explained Langrell.

Without the project, Langrell said the ethanol plants will likely begin to struggle, which in turn would create a ripple effect that would make the corn producers struggle.

"That's the heart of why Summit Carbon Solutions was created. It keeps ethanol plants viable and allows corn producers to keep selling their corn at a premium," commented Langrell.

According to Langrell, Summit's estimated investment into the county was around $16 million, and the annual property taxes would generate $627,914 in revenue. Right now, Summit was planning to start construction in August of 2023.

"Currently we are at 40 percent of easement miles required in the state of Iowa, and I have been in touch with county engineer Karen Albert to discuss utility permits and other permitting to make sure we are giving the county engineers exactly what they want to see. So far, we have not submitted any permits in Montgomery County as of yet," Langrell said.

Supervisor Charla Schmid asked why there was such an important need to capture carbon, and the purpose behind it. Langrell said the purpose for Summit was for the ethanol plants.

"Because of regulations coming down the line, ethanol plants are having to purchase carbon credits, so pumping it and sequestering it will lower the need for credits and allow them to sell their ethanol for higher premiums," Langrell explained. "Studies show it will also be a benefit to the environment, but I know some people still debate that."

So far, Summit has not received the state permit from the Iowa Utilities Board to proceed with the project. Also, this is the first carbon pipeline project being undertaken by Summit Carbon Solutions.

Supervisor Mike Olson advised residents who had spoken that while the board heard their concerns, the board itself had little power.

"We have no say at all in its approval. It's all up to the Iowa Utilities Board and the State of Iowa. We sent a letter denouncing eminent domain for a for-profit company. The legislature ignored all that, and voted against limiting eminent domain," Olson said. "I appreciate you all coming in because you're concerned, and you're good citizens. However, if we pass an ordinance, and the state passes a different set of guidelines, our ordinance has no meaning. There's just not much we can do. We can hire an engineering firm to bird-dog these people if they go through, and we will, but that's about all we can do."

No further action was taken by the supervisors.

Three SW IA farms receive Environmental Leader awards

Iowa Gov. Kim Reynolds, Lt. Gov. Adam Gregg, Secretary of Agriculture Mike Naig, and Department of Natural Resources Director Kayla Lyon will present 40 farm families with Iowa Farm Environmental Leader Awards during a ceremony at the Iowa State Fair at 10:30 a.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 17 at the Oman Family Youth Inn at the Iowa State Fairgrounds.

The award acknowledges Iowa farm families who have taken voluntary actions to improve and protect our state's natural resources and the environment while serving as leaders in their communities.

Local honorees include: Doug and Deb Maher, Montgomery County; Jerry Laughlin, Fremont County; and Meier

Family Farms, Page County.

These farm families use scientifically proven practices like cover crops, wetlands, bioreactors, and saturated buffers that support the goals of the Iowa Nutrient Reduction Strategy. These families recognize that the benefits of their conservation efforts extend far beyond their fields, and their leadership encourages others to adopt similar conservation practices. The winners were chosen by a committee representing both conservation and agricultural groups.

Since the creation of the Iowa Farm Environmental Leader Award in 2012, more than 690 Iowa farm families have been recognized. A list of previous recipients can be found at iowaagriculture.gov/farm-environmental-leader-awards.

Bank Iowa has appointed Ryan Hart as an ag and commercial loan officer at its Red Oak location.

Hart previously worked as a loan officer and credit analyst for Farm Credit Services of America.

"We are very pleased to welcome Ryan to our Bank Iowa team," said John McBride, Bank Iowa regional president. "His knowledge of the financial complexities of today's agricultural industry is exactly what our clients expect from the bank, and we look forward to seeing the impact Ryan has on our clients' success."

Hart grew up in Stanton, and obtained his bachelor's degree from Northwest Missouri State University. He looks forward to building relationships with customers in Red Oak and surrounding areas.

Three county bridges in need of repair

Nick Johansen
The Red Oak Express

Three problem bridges have been earmarked for work in Montgomery County.

During the secondary roads update at the Montgomery County Board of Supervisors meeting Aug. 9, county engineer Karen Albert said the county had received a deficient bridge notification from Calvin Burns and Associates, a consulting company that specializes in county bridges in Iowa.

“Based on the inspections, the bridge on 180th Street west of Q Avenue, Frankfort 1403; the bridge on 210th Street west of L Avenue, at Red Oak 3603; and the bridge over the railroad tracks in the City of Villisca were recommended for closure due to structural issues, so there have been barricades put up and those bridges have been closed,” Albert advised.

Supervisor Mike Olson asked if proposed work on the bridge on the county’s five year roads plan could be moved up.

“I see we have a low water crossing projected for 2024. There’s a farmer there that contacted me, and I believe he contacted you as well. His operation is going to be a huge inconvenience to go around, so if there’s any way you can look into that, it would be appreciated,” Olson said.

Albert said they are still looking at the potential for a low water crossing, or other options for the repair.

“We’re anticipating doing a low water crossing there, but we haven’t gotten any plans drawn up or anything yet, because we didn’t realize it was going to close that soon,” Albert said.

Albert said by converting to a low water crossing, it would allow for a cheaper method to make the repairs.

“In some instances when the bridges go down, instead of replacing it with another bridge, we can do a box culvert, or other replacements. Since that’s on a dirt road, we would try to use the most economical way to replace it, and that would be a low water crossing,” stated Albert.

The other county bridge,

Frankfort 1403 is also in the proposed five year construction plan.

“It’s scheduled for work this fiscal year. We had planned on letting it a little sooner this year, but with the funding source being changed to federal funding, there are additional requirements, and we are still trying to revise the designs, but that is one of our top priorities,” commented Albert.

Part of the reason for the urgency on those bridge repairs are due to the bridge’s location on a school bus route.

With the third problematic bridge located in the city limits of Villisca, repairs to that bridge will be paid for out of funds from the city.

In other business, the supervisors:

- Approved the sheriff’s report of fees for July, 2022, in the amount of $21,797.
- Approved a contract with the Elliott Public Library for services for FY 2022-23, in the amount of $6,020.

Absentee ballot requests may be filed for the upcoming general election

Montgomery County voters interested in voting absentee for the Nov. 8 General Election may file requests for absentee ballots with the Montgomery County Auditor’s Office starting Aug. 30.

Due to legislation changes, the time period to request absentee ballots has been reduced from 120 days to 70 days. The new legislation also has shortened the number of days that the auditor’s office may have ballots available for absentee voting.

Voters now have 20 days to vote absentee either by mail or in-person rather than 29 days. Voters wishing to receive a ballot by mail for the General Election will need to complete an absentee ballot request form and return it in person or by mail to the Montgomery County Auditor’s Office, 105 E Coolbaugh Street, P.O. Box 429, Red Oak, before 5 p.m. on Oct. 24.

Voters are reminded that due to recent legislation changes, the ballot must be returned to the county auditor’s office before the polls close at 8 p.m. on Nov. 8 to be counted.

In-person early voting in the auditor’s office and mailing of ballots will begin Oct. 19. Absentee ballot request forms can be found on the Montgomery County website at montgomerycountyia.gov or on the Iowa Secretary of State’s website at sos.iowa.gov.

They may also be requested by calling the Montgomery County Auditor’s office at 623-5127. For more information about the 2022 General Election, contact the Montgomery County Auditor’s office at 623-5127 or visit the county website at montgomerycountyia.gov.

just me and Jim working on it, it would be taking a lot longer, so he and I both appreciated that help,” stated Sallach.

On a personal level, Sallach said it has meant a lot for his artwork and painting to be endorsed not only by the ROAR group, but the Red Oak City Council as well, since the council gave approval for the painting to proceed.

“I’ve been struggling because I wanted to be an artist, but I’ve never quite had that motivational thing that has made me want to go all-in and go for it. This project has really motivated me to get that going,” Sallach said. “I just put up a website that has a lot of my artwork on it, and I’m working with some friends to do digital designs for them, and really diving into that artistic side of me that I’ve been hesitant to go after. It’s very special to me that this project is going to be displayed in the public where everyone can see it, and that I’m going to be able to leave my mark here, since I’ve lived here all my life. This is the beginning of my journey. I’m going to grow from this and not forget where I came from.”

Sallach is attending the University of Iowa in the fall, and while he’s not majoring in art at this point, he hasn’t ruled it out.

“I’m majoring in music and vocal performance, and cinema. I really love every aspect of arts and entertainment. While it’s the direction I’m going, I’m not really set on those two majors. Wherever my college journey leads me, I may end up in graphic design or other art program, but for right now, I’m just exploring and feeling out what I want to do for sure,” Sallach commented.

Sallach said he’ll be leaving Red Oak soon to begin his college journey, and the art project has been an excellent end to his summer and has given him a very special memory.

“I came to the University of Iowa on Aug. 13 to move into college for orientation stuff, so being able to work on this project and spend some good, quality time with my sister before I leave for college and don’t see her for a while really means a lot, and I’m glad to have been able to do it,” advised Sallach.

Currently, The third and Coolbaugh street planter box is the only one being painted, but Sallach said there are many others that are waiting for budding artists to improve.

“There are eight planter boxes in total, and they are looking for seven more designs. If anyone is looking to have a project, I would suggest they check out the Five One 8 website at thefiveone8.com/road, and you can read about the project and send in your submissions. Also, people can donate to the project,” said Sallach. “Since this is a community and volunteer project, a lot of the funding is coming from donations from the community, which are very appreciated. If someone doesn’t want to paint, but wants to aid the project, that’s a great way they can help.”

Sallach said if artwork is in progress on the other planter boxes while he’s visiting Red Oak from college, he’ll be glad to help paint the other boxes.

To see some of Sallach’s other artwork, his website is gannonsallachstudio.com.
